It is no wonder the moguls of the radio industry are nervous. Finally, well-rounded & diverse listeners have a radio format that caters to one's distinct tastes and moods without the monotony of 20-song playlists and commercial interruptions every 15 minutes. Satellite radio offers a range of music and formats whose airplay have all but been destroyed by the consolidation of radio corporations.

Even more encouraging is that satellite radio would try to expand into regional programming. As a listener, if I wish to pay for my radio service, I should not be restricted to national programming only.

Big radio conglomerates are obviously trying to restrict our 1st amendment rights and should be ashamed. Even more ashamed should be those in Congress who support their effort to limit satellite radio to a national stage only. When will the FCC and those Congressional supporters of this absurd bill stop catering to big business lobbyists? It is a sad state of affairs. This is just another reason to put satellite radio in our second car.
